She's at it again! In this fourth installment in the Whiskey Mattimoe series, Magnet Springs is in a frenzy over multiple sightings of dead mayor Gil Gruen and the self-induced exile of their resident Seven Suns of Solace adviser, Noonan Starr, just when she's needed most. While opportunity knocks at Whiskey's door in the form of a sexy Scotsman with real estate agent potential, a charming karma-obsessed self-help author with dating potential, and Whiskey's ex-husband, who possesses the potential to drive her out of her mind, mayhem abounds. When one of Whiskey's tenants is found murdered on the shores of Lake Michigan and the children in the young woman's charge disappear, it's up to canine-challenged Whiskey to rescue Magnet Springs from a scandal unlike any other it's ever known. Can Whiskey help the town discover the truth about Twyla Rendel's death and lay Gil Gruen to rest for good before it's too late?

Rexanna Ipock-Brown says

More quirky characters and more deaths to solve by said characters. These books have the right balance of mystery, adventure and romance for a good read.

Nothing like a hot, steamy summer day to reach out and grab the novel, "Whiskey and Water." No, this is not a bartender's guide but a laugh out loud episode of the lives of real estate agent, Whiskey Mattimoe and her beloved? 3 dogs, no not a typo. Whiskey's daughter-in-law and her twins, and other hangers on. The usual troops are out on the hunt too.

What is the crime? Abra is after Norman, no that isn't unusual, but when Abra finds a small child's running shoes, the hunt goes on to find a missing or missing children. What is going on?

This novel is meant to be silly and is a great break between harder written murders.

I do enjoy them so.
