Sweetwater Springs Christmas by Debra Holland and friends (anthology)

Lots of emotion, holiday generosity and family love. Very sweet. Loved these stories. Many tears. I truly enjoyed all the stories but the ones by Debra Holland also filled in a couple of blanks from the series and made the anthology wonderful.

Stories all center around the Christmas Eve Party at the new hotel in Sweetwater. The first and last by Debra Holland are tied together and include recurring characters and the joy of charity and benevolence.

The last is also Ben's change from hoodlum to grown up good guy. It's so sweet. I had missed this story of change and had wondered about it.

And Ike's story: so moving.

The Gift of Music by Debra Holland

Sugarplum Dreams by Cynthia Woolf - a sweet shop opens by a single female. She and the carpenter helping her fall in love. Sweet and yah for female entrepreneurs. Mentions of the shop show up throughout the anthology.

Wishes on a Star by Linda Carroll-Bradd

A Christmas to Remember by Paty Jager

A Best Present by Linda McLaughlin - a few tears with this one but we learn Widow Murphy does have a soft heart when given the right opportunity.

The Christmas Crossing by Bev Pettersen - such determination, and responsibilities for a young woman. And they put her in jail! For her protection, of course. Lovely story.

A Family for Ike by Debra Holland - so sad, so lovely. Family and connections. The joy of quiet and love of reading.

A Christmas Far From Home by E. Ayers - the generosity of sharing, and the opposites of good people and bad.

A Promise for Christmas by Tori Scott - a brother supports a widow and falls in love

Sweetwater Springs Scrooge by Debra Holland ( inclusion in the audible version and the copy, not in the print version) - a Scrooge, second chance older couple romance. They start off with amusement in her grandchild, and soon realize their feelings for each other are still alive.

Abigail's Christmas Angel by MJ Fredrick

Laughed out loud on this one - while on public transportation. Benedict thinking of future children with Abigail while at Christmas church services singing hymns. "Dear God", he prayed, "if we are blessed with children, please let them get my singing voice."

A New Home for Christmas by Trish Milburn

Upon a Midnight Clear by Jill Marie Landis

The Joy of Christmas by Debra Holland

The party. And Ben growing up. Loved this entire anthology but this one wrapped it together and tied it in a pretty red bow. With tinsel.

I switched between the audible and paperback version.

I really enjoyed all the stories about the town and the people of Sweetwater Springs. I almost feel like part of the family and just continually want to know what's going on in their lives as if they were real. Great writing from all the authors. Stories just flowed seamlessly. This was so much fun! I enjoyed the audio version I was gifted at a Facebook party.

These short stories were the perfect length for my daily drives!

I loved the interconnections to each other as well as the original characters from the multi author series! We got to visit the mini horses again, and see the spoiled kid Ben mature and become a true friend. We visit with the opera singer who's sister lives in town. We get a front row seat to the fancy hotel that was being built in the other books!

We meet plenty of new characters as well! This is a delightful collection that truly kept a smile on my face! Even though there was only the one narrator for this anthology, I thought Lara Asmundson did amazing and I'm now a big fan of hers!

A Nice Set of Filler Stories for Sweetwater Springs

This is a set of short stories all based in Sweetwater Springs. While some were written by Debra Holland, others were not. Apparently, the authors were given parameters to follow and characters to link to. Some authors are better than others at following the social rules of the times. All in all a good set of stories to fill in details about characters in this series.
