We are told that goosebumps are a natural occurrence, but could it actually be your body trying to warn you of impending danger? There's an invasion going on all around us and we're completely unaware.

Humans are very complex creatures, but even with our contradictions and flaws we have something special that other beings desire.

The elder inhabitants from NeVaeh are sending their young to study us. Their mission: to comprehend everything there is to know about "the fleshlings."

Humans make the perfect hosts. They don't even realize that the foreign energies are all around, lurking in the shadows, just waiting for the perfect opportunity to embody and become one with them.

Why are the NeVaehans here and what do they want? The truth will shock you and leave you looking over your shoulder long after the story ends.

We are not alone...

Tanya says

I thought this was pretty boring.

Gene Molloy says

This was not a bad book, but then again it was not a great book. It would have benefited greatly from a better Editor.

In the beginning I was amused in a silly sort of way. I could see this being written by a Cone Head in an old Saturday Night Live skit.

Once I got past that I started really enjoying the book.

My biggest problem with this book is that once I got to the end it seemed like it was left unfinished. It seemed like just a big build up to the real story.

Heather Mahley says

really enjoyed this book. it was very unique. a book about an alien invasion only from the perspective of the ones doing the invading. loved it.
