Angelic Layer, Vol. 4 CLAMP

Nobody thought Misaki Suzuhara would make it this far in the Angelic Layer tournament. After a rocky start and some less than honorable opponents, she's well on her way to victory. But her latest opponent is her most difficult yet. Ohjiro Mihara is called the Prince of the Layer, and for good reason. With his speed-type angel, Wizard, he's unstoppable. Has Misaki reached the end of the road?

Great story, lovely art. Another great series from CLAMP.

As one would expect, the battles get more intense. And we see more of the mysterious woman lurking in the background, who may possibly be Misaki's mother--that's certainly what CLAMP seems to want us to think, at least. And there's a stealth climax to this book. The main story ends on a cliffhanger well before the end of the book, and then we get a couple of side stories to round out the volume. Sneaky!

Such a fun read! The action is almost like watching it live. I love how Clamp draws the characters when they are walking casually. It's so adorable! I am loving this series and can't wait to see how it ends.

Pretty much the same as the last review for Volume 3, I think that the story is cute and adorable but ultimately geared toward children and a little repetitive. I love the character designs for the Angels and Humans alike.

Misaki is an extremely cute and adorable heroine. I loved her enthusiasm for playing Angelic Layer and her determination to strive to do her best. Reading this story made me want to have a doll of my own. I loved all of the cool technology that went into the plot and characters making the story more enjoyable to read.

I did see the anime and truthfully I liked that better because the characters were so much more present. They had past lives and a lot more feeling than CLAMP was able to bring into the manga.

Note: This review is based on Volumes 1-5.

LIGHT WEIGHT!!!

God how did I not think of it Dx !?

But honestly, I'm sooo intrigued about Sorcier! My theory is something to do with electricity ?? I dont know, maybe, I'm no Misaki (who I think knows at the end) but still xD

Kotaro & Misaki forever !!!! x3 (yes, I know it's not a romance, but I want them to have more and more cute moments of blushing !!)
