Welcome to the Clamp School, Japan's most prestigious place of learning--home to prodigies, wunderkinds and young geniuses of every make and model. Meet the Clamp School Detectives: Nokoru Imonoyama, the world's smartest kid--he can detect a woman in distress from 2 kilometers away; Suoh Takamura, a martial arts master who's cool as ice; Akira Ijyuin, detective by day, master thief by night. ## From Reader Review Clamp School Detectives, Vol. 03 for online ebook

Seri terakhir dari komik Clamp School Detective. Hampir setengahnya bercerita tentang pertemuan pertama Nokoru dan Suoh. Dibagian akhir gemas banget Nokorunya tidur XD. Kayaknya di animenya diceritain tentang OSIS dari setiap tingkatan, tapi dikomik cuma dilihatin OSIS TK dan SD aja. Ceritanya ringan dan lumayan buat melihat kehebatan anak-anak SD dan tidak ada (belum) di dunia nyata hahaha ^^.

Soooo, the last Volume of this lovely mini-series made me understand why people ship Nokoru and Souh. (Because they're soulmates XD. Seriously, chapter 11 proved that their relationship is similar to several other canon CLAMP pairings. Sure, Suoh has a girlfried. But the same can be said about Touya from Card Captor Sakura, that doesn't necessary make her his soulmate.)

The whole series was a lovely and quick read and it was incredibly funny - surprisingly no angst, loss of eyes or limbs or character death, just super perfect boys in their little shorts. I wish more book main characters would be like those three.

Yay, CLAMP!

The final volume of Clamp School Detectives is also, to me at least, the best one. It's here where we get to one of my favorite parts about Clamp - them writing about the interactions of two good friends. They can *really* do this well, and in this volume, we get a story about how Nokoru and Suoh met and became friends. It's a bit over the top, a bit harrowing and a bit uncomfortable (Yeah, that grown-up adult lady person is totally propositioning that elementary schooler...) but the interplay and the concern between the two kids is really nicely stated.

It also features a floating penguin. So there's that.

All in all, this doesn't change anything about the series overall, but if you've stuck with the series to this point it's a strong capstone on the experience.

There is something so childlike and innocent, yet mature and wise about Clamp novels that has me going back to them time and time again.

Given the episodic nature of most of the chapters and the frequent recounting of the premise the earlier volumes aren't a prerequisite to read/enjoy this one, but it is the finale of the series and features previously introduced characters.

The unimaginably perfect trio of sixth graders is always willing to aid any and all "damsels in distress," but things are a bit different when one of their own is in jeopardy.

CLAMP varies the formula in these chapters, to good effect. The first is a ridiculous little "case" played entirely for comedy. Since it focuses on the personalities involved it was amusing. The second is an ok story that sees Suoh with an uneasy feeling that he's being watched.

The long awaited backstory of Suoh and the chairman is told in the penultimate chapter. It's over-the-top and riddled with cliches (one of which I was just mocking for unrelated reasons yesterday, only to come across it here), but still entertaining. Part of the explanation of things hinted at in previous volumes was very disappointing though.

The closing tale is fitting for the manga and sees cute cameos from earlier stories.

Despite an extremely rough start Clamp School Detectives turned into an enjoyable little series. It never quite put enough of a spin on the cliches and tropes it used to feel like proper parody, but was still amusing overall.
