I'm a fan of "Elmaktaba El7'adra2", I belong to the generations that loved these stories, remember when I used to read it w/ ma sister, mom was a fan too, told me that she read it in her childhood too, it's amazing how this series affected many generations, but not the new ones anyway, these stories r too naive 4 the new generations :)

Reading this story now makes me wonder what the writer was trying to teach us by this story -of course there was teaching, that was part of the thing, teaching & disciplining the children- all I got was the good and bad ppl that were basically born this way, and of course we learn that the good ppl win @ the end, and the bad ppl get a very harsh punishment...

This writer was obviously religious, there were many mentions that God saved the good ones by sending them fairies to help them out, which is kinda weird coz there r no fairies in our culture..

Anyway, the story is nice, the language is really good & I loved the pics too...

OMG, I can't believe these books are on goodreads.

The Green Library /“?????? ??????” is my childhood memories, my mother use to read me these books when I was Little before bed, and as I grew older I reread them again by myself as an activity in summer vacation.

These books are the first books that I have read and because of them that I started to love reading and they were definitely the beginning of my road into becoming the “bookworm” that I am.
