Montana Cowboy's Baby Linda Ford

Stand-in Daddy

Conner Marshall knows the baby on the doorstep isn't his—despite what the note says—but little Ellie needs a protector...and urgent medical care. Turning to the doctor's daughter and capable assistant, Kate Baker, for help, he keeps the truth to himself. Why should he care if Kate believes the worst of him? The wary rancher can't afford feelings for a woman who'll soon be moving east for medical school.

A promise to her dying grandmother decided Kate's future. She'll become a doctor and forgo a family of her own. Now, tending to Ellie at the Marshall ranch, she sees just what she's sacrificing, especially when Ellie's mother returns. But the littlest matchmakers can sometimes make the biggest dreams come true...

Montana Cowboy's Baby by Linda Ford is a Big Sky Country series. This is a historical romance and takes place in 1890. The Marshall family is well known in town. This is the third son's story. A baby is left at the Marshall ranch saying it is Conner's baby. He says it isn't. He feels the mother left the baby at their ranch for a reason. Maybe the baby was in danger. Conner takes the baby in and pretends it is his to keep her safe. Conner likes the doctor's daughter but won't get involved with Conner. She figures the mother of the child will come back and want to marry him. When the mother does show up she is dying. She puts Conner's name on birth certificate because she knew he would take good care of her.

It was good. Ford is one of my favorite authors in this genre. The ending was too perfect but at the same time worked.
