Cami says

There is so much pure goodness in this woman.

Corrie Ten Boom was a concentration camp survivor and now (in this book) an itinerant preacher/motivational speaker. She was Dutch and a Christian. She and her family were imprisoned by the Nazis for harboring Jews. Ten Boom died at the age of 91 in 1983.

She went where the Lord sent her, found contacts that would allow her to speak to congregations, those in prison and other groups.

This book is set up as a daily devotional book with a beginning thought or quote followed by her personal experiences witnessing for the Lord. Her humility was a wonderful example to me, challenging my selfish and prideful thoughts. Her way of writing makes you feel like you're sitting with her having an conversation, very practical speech.

This was good soul soap. Easy to read. I rarely stopped at just one chapter daily. 3.5 stars

Can't really explain why, but this book moved me. Corrie ten Boom seems like a person i would have loved to meet. Her faith is so simple and yet there is a depth to it that is hard to pinpoint.

Monica Willyard says

This is a wise, compassionate, uplifting book written by a Dutch woman who spent years in a concentration camp for helping juice to escape the Nazis. With gods help and Grace, she was able to rebuild her life, home, and achieved a great deal toward forgiveness of her Nazi captors. She has modeled forgiveness, patience, and optimism for me in a way that is tangible that I can learn from. She is with the Lord now, and her voice is one I missed. She always taught me something new threw her books and in her talks.

Tom James says

A collection of Corrie Ten Boom's accounts as she travelled the world speaking to churches, college students, youth groups, and prisoners testifying of the goodness of God in her life. In order to grasp the full impact of Miss Ten Boom's message, one ought to read her autobiographical "The Hiding Place" first. "The Hiding Place" tells of her life growing up in Holland in her father's watchmaking shop, hiding Jews in her attic during WWII, her arrest, and her life in a Nazi concentration camp. Because of her horrific experiences of the labour camp at Ravensbruck, Corrie Ten Boom was able to spend the next thirty-five years testifying of God's providence even through the most difficult circumstances. This particular book can be read devotionally, as each chapter is short and tells a story that stands on its own. Miss Ten Boom explains how she continues to learn to trust in God's wisdom and goodness.

Jessica says

This is totally a religious book--basically ten Boom's recounting of her works travels as a evangelical missionary. Her complete faith, humility, and courage was inspiring. I was interested in how my beliefs differ from hers, but loved how this book shows that true discipleship of Christ brings peace and joy regardless of your domination.

Kathleen says

I have loved Corrie for years, but had never read this book (thanks Preston!). She has been on my list for years of "people I want to meet in heaven". I am lifted by her powerful testimony and love for the Savior.

Bekah says

This was a delightful book about how we as Christians need to stay connected with the Vine, which is the Lord Jesus Christ. We are no good if we are 'detached' from Him!

A few of the stories I had already read in a couple of her previous books, but that didn't bother me at all and I enjoyed every chapter. Corrie ten Boom is definitely one of my favorite authors!
