I have pre-ordered this anthology but was given an advance copy of the Coming Home to Christmas Town pod to review. As I read more of this anthology, I will post the reviews.

In The Comeback Christmas, we get to read about Chloe Wright and Ted Lincoln. Once again, these two are longtime friends who had a falling out long ago. Chloe inherited the old grist mill from her family and Ted feels he needs this building and land to save his family. Both have family issues and trauma to work thru and of course, it only works when they do it together. Feel good story and it is great to get the whole Wright family picture of Chloe, Marnie and Noelle.

In Bells Are Ringing, it was my first time visiting Christmas Town, Maine and I read this story first in this wonderful town. It is a sweet holiday story and was about Marnie and Sam. These two have their issues, of course, but reading about how they worked thru them made this such a great read for the holiday season.

Marnie finally has the chance of a lifetime, design school in NY and a ticket out of Christmas Town. She and Sam have been best friends forever and there are so many deep feelings between them that they cannot see it. Sam feels he isn't successful enough, in anyone's eyes, due to circumstances in his past. He is a carpenter/handyman and has amazing talent but you'll need to read his story to see all that he has endured. And he loves Marnie, no doubt about it. He just doesn't want to hold her back.

Great story, people, and a wonderful small town read. I love Ms. Stewart's writing and believe you will, too. I highly recommend.

In Home by Christmas, the third story in the pod by Anna Adams, we get to read the story of Noelle. Noelle's story is about David Parker, an old love and long ago friend, and his twin daughters. It was all about all four of them, really, overcoming past deep hurts and trauma. I loved the little girls! They are two very different characters, that's for sure. And David broke my heart. It was great to read the entire three "girls" stories.

[Bells are Ringing was the first story in this anthology that I read and reviewed. That review is below. The review, above, is for the entire Coming Home To Christmas Town pod of three interconnected stories and I have encompassed all three reviews, above. I have left the first, single, review and it follows this note.]

This Review is for The Gingerbread Men

The Gingerbread Heart by Liz Flaherty

The Gingerbread Heart introduced me to Cass, a fifty something woman who has seen life and death in her life. Who has seen happiness and sadness too. Married to her high school sweetheart, she had a happy marriage. Until her husband died. And was followed by her mother. She has been a caregiver all her life and wishes for something different.

Moving back in town, she decides not to live with her daughters so as to give them the space everyone needed at that age. Therefore she finds a job with the pastor (at least he used to be a pastor), Eli Welcome, who is now a writer.

Eli finds this woman attractive who only wants to think of herself for the time being. The clash of these two opposite thinking people make it a fun read.

Though Cass says she does not want to take care of anyone anymore, except for her children, deep down she is a caregiver and will always remain so.

But the most important thing the two learn about loving each other is that whatever either one of them decides to do with their life, the other is always there.

Life gives second chances and they are there to be lived and cherished.

The Gingerbread Pony by Patricia Bradley

Amy Logan, Cass' elder daughter, is a speech therapist who operated out of her home office at her family farm. After a unfortunate event in her past, she had been the recipient of many a piteous looks around the small Christmas Town she lives in. To save herself from all that she decides to move to Texas but before she could sign her contract, she comes face to face with her first love, Mark Bradford who needs help with his daughter. The young child suffers from selective mutism.

Unsure as to what way to move, she reluctantly agrees and falls in love with the beautiful and intelligent child. She loves the father already.

The past is a glaring hurdle in their lives still and it is up to them to accept the person who they love as they are. Not imposing someone who you can put on a pedestal and losing the person for good.

The feelings if true can stand the test of time and theirs had. Since they were in high school.

The question remains, could they make a go for it? They have to be sure because it is not only their hearts at stake but that of a child's too. A child who is engulfed in grief and guilt.

A family or parting of ways?

This one is my favourite of all three (because of the horse riding and all).

The Gingerbird House by Rula Sinara

This is the story of Lia and Quinn. Lia is the owner of an animal shelter while Quinn is a craftsman. Whatever his circumstances, that is what the man is.

This story not only shows how one must be giving to others, humans and animals both, but also how one must always believe in themselves at all times too.

Quinn has been homeless for sometime but in his struggle and fear of having let go of his son to either his ex wife or the social services, loses his enthusiasm for risk taking. Just wanting a plain old job that would keep his child housed and well fed.

Lia on the other hand wants nothing but to succeed in making her shelter and animal rehab a better place so she can help all the animals left out there.

But both are in a situation where they are left pinching pennies. One is full of hope while the other not so.

This book is about setting the right priorities and finding your true self. Once found, staying true to it. It also gives the idea of how everyday could be Christmas Season only if people can find the right vibes within them to emit.

Loved all three of the novellas.

Harelequin has a non-religious secular clean wholesome line called the Heartwarming line. This is a Christmas novella anthology of 12 Harelequin Heartwarming authors, whom are USA Today, national bestselling, award winning authors. Every 3 novellas of the 12 novellas share characters and storylines, so the anthology is divided up into 4 "books". Every novella by itself though, is a complete story with no cliff hangers. All the stories take place in Christmastown, Maine.

Pauline Frost says

I received an ARC copy of The Fisher Brothers Christmas from the author Carol Ross in exchange for an honest review which is in the box set.

Reading The Christmas Bell you find out the struggles both Ben Fisher and Andrea Talbot go through for a bell and find their HEA ending.

Then Making Up Under The Mistletoe you see how Josh and Ivy Fisher are still struggling together after everyone felt they wouldn't make it being married so young when they realize they still have a lot of years to be together in good and bad as long as they are together.

My Christmas Hero shows that both Rick Fisher and Julianna Kramer are each others heroes and how they will be good for each other together.

I loved all three brothers stories and how family is important to all of them. I purchased the box set to read the rest.

Kindle Copy for Review

This is a twelve set novellas with four connecting stories in A Heartwarming Christmas box set about finding love along the way.

In the first set Coming Home to Christmas Town by Melinda Curtis, Anna Adams, & Anna J Stewart. We meet three adopted siblings gather for the holiday season to find closure after their adopted father dies.

Novella 1: The Comeback Christmas by Melinda Curtis

Can a high school love be reconnected with magical apples and a rundown mill? Second chances and doing the right thing is not necessary mix when it comes to love and sometimes first loves can be the best love.

Novella 2: Bells Are Ringing by Anna J Stewart

Old childhood friends can be your true love even when you try to deny it. When you take a chance at one thing you dream of doing might find you on another path that you might not realized. Thrown in a wedding chapel and you might find yourself down that path.

Novella 3: A Home by Christmas by Anna Adams

After running a bakery after her failed love in Boston for a few years now. She does not expect to see him again after all this time. But this time he is not alone but has two daughters who recently lost their mother. Will he be able to steal her heart again as well as his daughters who need a dose of motherly love?

Susan Parkes says

I was lucky to receive an ARC with three of these novellas: Coming Home to Christmas Town. These stories are about 3 women who were adopted by Mr & Mrs Harold Wright - Chloe, Marnie & Noelle. In all three stories Harold Wright has just passed away leaving all three of his daughters part of his legacy to do with as they wish.

1. The Comeback Christmas by Melinda Curtis.

This story is about Chloe (who has been left the old mill) and Teddy Lincoln, they were childhood friends and Chloe had a major crush on him but when they grew older Teddy used to ignore her, until one summer night and this is when things changed between them and she was left upset.

Now years later Chloe is back home after a disastrous business going under to sell the mill to get her out of debt. The one person that asked to buy it however is Teddy and she does not want to sell to him because of the memories that the place holds.

This is a fabulous story of old friendships, truths and love. I thoroughly enjoyed the interaction between these characters.

2. Bells are Ringing by Anna J Stewart

This novella is about Marnie (she was left the Wedding Chapel) and Sam Collins. Marnie and Sam have been best friends since first grade and recently Marnie has been having feelings towards him. One morning she tells him that she has got through the initial application for design school, Sam is shocked that she want to leave the town and the Wedding Chapel but agrees to help her with her design project that she needs to do, as the next part of her application. This is a story of friendship, a town coming together, love and romance.

3. Home by Christmas by Anna Adams

This novella is about Noelle (was left the house) and David Parker. Noelle and David were high school sweethearts and moved together to Boston but because of David's work ethics Noelle never seemed to see him and they parted ways.

Years later after the death of his ex-wife Claudia, David returns for Christmas to town with his two daughters to give them a good Christmas without any distractions, only to run into Noelle outside her bakery.

Noelle is shocked to see David again, even more shocked when he phones her later that same day asking can she look after his daughters - she is shocked but agrees to help him.

This story is about family bonding, friendships, trust and love.

I loved all three of these novellas and I am sure the others would be fab too.

This review is for Tara Randel's An Unexpected Gift, and I cannot wait to read the rest of these stories once the set releases.

I loved this beautiful story about a hero looking for family and finding love along the way. Tara has a wonderfully captivating writing style and Faith and Drew were easy to fall in love with. Definitely put me in a holiday mood!

The Fisher Brothers Christmas
The Christmas Bell

This is the first book that I have read by Carol Ross. It is a must read for the avid romance reader. I started this book earlier today and just could not put it down.

Andrea runs an antique shop and is barely able to make ends meet. She is helping Ben find a Christmas bell that used to hang in their hometown of Christmas town.

This book tells about their search for the bell and how much it means to the town, to Ben's family, and to Ben and to her. A story you are sure to enjoy.

The second book about the Fisher Brothers features Ivy and Josh. The name of the book is Making-Up Under the Mistletoe. They have issues throughout their marriage that needs resolving. One of them is a control freak who wants everyone to follow her plan. She panics when things do not go the way she wants.

Josh however is tired of making sacrifices. Throughout the story you wonder if they will make their marriage work or go their separate ways. A great book I am sure you will agree.

The last book in the Fisher Brothers group is My Christmas Hero. This is the story of Julianna Kramer and Rick Fisher. I can relate to this book because I often have days like Julianna had that Christmas Eve. If something can go wrong it will. All throughout the book things were happening to Julianna and Rick had to come and save her.

In the end I wonder who really saved who. A cute story that kept my interest and made it hard to put the book down.

Amanda R says

Thanks to Amy Vastine for The Fisher Brother's Christmas set of novellas for me to read and review. I've not read the other books but I plan on it as soon as the book comes out. I love Christmas stories, these were a perfect read for the cooler weather we've been having. I'll go book by book so that my reviews don't run together.

Novella 1: The Christmas Bell by Carol Ross, Harlequin Heartwarming author.

The geek and the popular girl. Now adults can Andrea show Ben that she's not the shallow girl she was back then? Can Ben see that Andrea has grown up and wants more than a friendship with him?

This one was cute. Ben hasn't lived in Christmas Town for a while. He's home for Christmas, and has been working with Andrea to find a long lost bell for his dad for a present. He's been wanting to come home to stay, he just needs to know that it's the right thing.

I liked Ben, even if he was a little dense sometimes when it came to Andrea. Andrea was trying to do something nice and it ended up causing strife. In the end, it's Christmas and a time for miracles.

Novella 2: Making Up Under the Mistletoe by Cheryl Harper, Harlequin Heartwarming author.

Ivy and Josh, high school sweethearts that just seem to have grown apart. He wants to get out from under the shadow of his brother and dad and be the firefighter he wants to be instead of Crash. All Ivy wants to do is stay and make a success out of her dad's company. She can't leave him, it would crush him.

This one made me a little sad. It seemed like Ivy gave up, just threw in the towel. She heard Josh say he took a test to join another fire house in another town and all she really heard was he was leaving her. All they needed was real communication. The love was always there, it just got buried in life. Christmas is that magical time of year when all things are possible, even coming back from the brink of divorce.

Novella 3: My Christmas Hero by Amy Vastine, Harlequin Heartwarming author.

Julianna and Rick, These two had me laughing and sighing. They know each other but just in a passing kind of way. Julianna has always had a crush on Rick and he on her but they've never acted on it. Rick is on course to take over for his dad as Chief, so a social life isn't even on his radar. Julianna has come home after a bad relationship and is trying to get her life back on track. Getting stuck in a tree is just the start of Rick coming to her rescue.

While I enjoyed the other two novellas in this set I have to say I loved Rick and Julianna the most. She was a regular girl with regular issues. They were both just doing enough to get through life. With Julianna in his life he saw that he could have a personal life and be Chief.

Again, I'd like to thank Amy for the gift of the set to read and review. These were just a perfect amount to whet my appetite for more Christmas stories to come. I look forward to reading more from these authors, they certainly did a fantastic job with these stories! Leave them love in the form of a review.

received The Fisher Brothers Christmas for honest review.

The Christmas Bell by Carol Ross

This story was very cute. Andrea and Ben have great chemistry. Andrea is helping Ben find a bell that means a lot to his family and their town. Ben who had a crush on Andrea when they were in high school still has feelings for her now as grown-ups. Andrea who grew up as a spoiled rich girl. Ben sees how much Andrea has changed to that girl he crushed on back in high school. This a short great read.

Making up Under the Mistletoe by Cheryl Harper

Josh and Ivy high school sweethearts that are now married are having issues. Ivy a control freak that wants things her way. Josh who always gives in and does what Ivy wants. Josh is tired of making sacrifices. Josh feels he can accomplish more by moving. Ivy who's helping her dad run the business doesn't want to leave. This a great book.

My Christmas Hero by Amy Vastine

This is also cute and humorous story. This story is about Jules and Rick. Poor Jules has the worst luck throughout the story. Rick who rescues Jules everytime and the hero. Jules moves back after she gets her heartbroken. Little does she know Rick will help through all this. Also a great book.

Kristina Knight says

I absolutely loved this boxed set. 12 novellas for under $1 is too good a deal to pass up, but my favorite thing about this particular set is how the stories were interwoven. There are 4 'books' made up of 3 novellas each (hence the 12 sweet stories) and all are set during the holidays.

I started with Liz Flaherty's The Gingerbread Heart - as always her characters came alive for me through the pages, and I rooted for Cass from the first page. She was exactly the right mix of feisty and feminine. Liz's book is paired with Rula Sinara's and Patricia Bradley's and all three center on a family of women coming together and falling in love during the holidays. You'll love how these women find and embrace their happily ever after.

If you're looking for some quick, holiday-themed romances with character you'll root for this is a great set.

Melissa Ram says

I was given an advanced copy of "The Fisher Brothers Christmas" in exchange for an honest review.

Let me start by saying that I love novellas. Single servings of light drama and romance are the perfect fit for me, and I loved that this set had great standalone stories that fit together and enhanced each other so well.

My favorite was the final novella, My Christmas Hero. Rick and Julianna were both likable and independent characters who couldn't help but get caught up in the festivity and romance of the holidays.

"Never in all his years with the fire department had Rick forgotten he was on duty. Until today. What was he doing? Julianna was messing with his head. There was still a lot of work to be done and even more once he finished his shift. If he wanted to earn his men's respect as their captain someday, there was no room on his to-do list for kissing Julianna.

No matter how much he wanted to do it."

I can't help but smile while thinking about their story. It is the perfect read to get you ready for the holiday season.

Katie W says

(4.5 Stars) I received a copy of Book 2, The Fisher Brothers stories, in exchange for an honest review.

I love stories that build on each other and that's just what these novellas do. In The Christmas Bell, we meet the oldest Fisher brother, Ben. He's got a successful business in CA, but is home in Christmas Town, Maine for the holidays. Coming from a long family line of fire fighters, he decides the perfect gift for his father, the fire chief, is to find the missing bell and bring it home. Ben is a very determined character, who is also a little insecure and clueless at times. He is so adorable, in kind of a dorky way, and I couldn't help but to like him.

Andrea is an old high school classmate, one who always seemed to have it all. Determined to make her own way in life, she's now into history and antiques and Ben contacts her for help finding the bell. I love how independent Andrea is and the cautious way this friendship develops into more.

What good is a love story without a little misunderstanding, some mistletoe, and a cozy, heartwarming setting? I loved this town, this family, these characters, and their story. I love a small town with a homey feel, well established traditions, and this really came through for me.

In Making Up Under the Mistletoe, we treated to the story of the next brother in the Fisher family--Josh. Josh married his high school sweetheart, Ivy, eight years ago and they've had quite a marriage. He is a fire fighter with his dad and brother, Rick, but his heart is set on moving on and having a break from Christmas Town. On the verge of divorce, Ivy and Josh have to figure out what really matters if they want to have any chance of saving their marriage.

I'm chalking it up to marrying so young, but this couple really has trouble communicating. Ivy is so set on helping her dad and doing what she thinks is best that she doesn't ever really hear Josh and his opinions. On the other hand, Josh, otherwise known as Crash, is a risk taker, knows what he wants in life, and thinks he's doing what's best for his small family, but he doesn't stop to talk about things with Ivy. Too much assumption going on!

I loved the Christmas miracles that occurred in this story. I grew to love the characters and to understand them and their motives. My heart was touched with this enjoyable story.

My Christmas Hero really hit home for me! Rick is next in line to be fire chief, but has to continue to prove himself, since his dad is the current chief. He's a very commanding, yet likable guy and I easily fell for his character.

Julianna, or Jules, is a sweet local girl who does odd jobs, including that of a dog walker. What hit home most is that she's not a perfect woman. While walking a dog, she ends up stuck in a tree and has to be rescued. And that's only the beginning! Her day goes from bad to worse and Rick's right there in the middle of it all. I relate best to Jules because we're a lot alike.

I love the way Rick is able to take an embarrassing situation and turn it around. He is challenged to ask Jules out, but is determined to follow his own timetable when it comes to love and not that of someone else. The romantic sparks flickering in this wonderful Christmas setting hit the spot. The icing on the cake is the humor and banter. I completely enjoyed this one!

Content: all three stories are sweet, clean romances with mild kissing only. Clean!

Heather says

I've only read 3 of the stories so here is my review for the three connecting Novellas

The Fisher Brothers Christmas

By Carol Ross, Cheryl Harper, and Amy Vastine

This Christmas set is a wonderful start to getting anyone into the Christmas spirit. A collection that shares three tales of two brothers who find love as well as one who tries to save a love that could be lost forever.

Make sure you have some tissues handy because if you're anything like me you will have plenty of happy tears.

The Christmas Bell

By Carol Ross

Ben Fisher is on a mission to find Christmas Town's Christmas Bell for his father. The ultimate Christmas present for him. Being that he lives in California and has had no luck tracking the location of the bell, his mother suggests he talk to Andrea Talbot. The girl he tutored in high school, the girl who turned him down when he asked her out on a date. Having nowhere else to turn he asks and she agrees. Ben comes back to Christmas Town, Maine to be with his family for the holiday and see just what has become of the beautiful Miss Talbot.

Andrea Talbot was the popular rich girl in school who had everything growing up but not anymore. She left the confines of her parent's conditional love and started her own business. She now spends her days collecting and selling antiques. She is low on money after finding and procuring the very Christmas Bell that Ben has been searching for. She hasn't told him yet because she wanted it to be a Christmas surprise and because she isn't truly sure she hasn't been scammed.

Carol does an excellent job giving her characters depth and making them very relatable. She has included adventure, mystery, intrigue, and some secrets in this story. It is fun and has a lot of real life elements. She has also included a sweet, frozen kitten into the mix.

Making Up Under the Mistletoe

By Cheryl Harper

Smart and pretty Ivy Fisher has always had a plan for her life. It started with marrying her high school sweetheart right away. Now she has every intention of living her life out here in Christmas Town with her husband and one day taking over her father's business, Coming to Town Bus Tours. That is until Josh tells her he wants to move to Portland and start fresh because he hates living in Christmas Town. Ivy is devastated and thinks that he is making plans to move on with his life without her and without consulting her.

Josh Fisher has always been a bit accident prone and his much hated nickname around town is Crash. He has also lived his life in the shadow of his father the Fire Chief and his brother Rick, the fire lieutenant. He knows that he will never advance at the firehouse because they all see him as Crash and also because his brother is in line to Chief one day. He wants to start fresh somewhere new, somewhere he can be Josh Fisher, rather than the son of Gus Fisher and the brother of Rick. He has allowed his wife to make all the plans for their life and now he wants a chance to make his own plans.

Oh and we can not forget the rambunctious Dash, the dog Ivy found shivering and abandoned under one of the tour bus. Ivy has always been against having a dog but has decided some change is needed and takes him home to Josh.

The emotions portrayed in this book are so profound and Cheryl writes them in a way that the reader can feel every single one. There is anger, hurt, assumed betrayal and joy. She writes of a love so profound it can weather anything as long as it is nurtured and taken care of.

My Christmas Hero

By Amy Vastine

Julianna Kramer (Jules) is working hard to find a sense of independence in her life, working several part time jobs to finally be able to get her own place. She is well organized and well-coordinated and does everything with proficiency that is until today. Today she has found herself in a few rather difficult situations that have required the handsome Rick Fisher to save her.

Rick Fisher is a responsible, respectful, goal oriented Firefighter who has spent his entire life following in his father's footsteps. He has had one goal and that has been to be the best firefighter and future chief he can be, nothing else matter. Rick has never thought of a future outside of being a firefighter, he never thought about settling down with a wife or such that is until today. After having to rescue Jules, not once or twice but three times, he starts seeing things in a different light.

Amy has written a story that like the previous novellas is extremely relatable, A story that we see all too often in real life. She has taken this realistic story and turned in to laughs and a possible happily-ever-after. She makes the reader realize that there is more to life than work, that everyone needs someone to share the spoils of their life with.
