Martha Ness says

I loved the book. The setting is in Gnaw Bone, Indiana where I was born and raised. When I opened the book to the first page and saw Gnaw Bone. I thought; what, not too many people knows where this little dot on the map is at. It was nice to see that the story painted a picture of lots of building and establishments. When I was a small child, there were 3 grocery stores, 3 churches, 2 sorghum mills, and a junk yard for cars. You are correct about how Gnaw Bone got its name. Some travelers were passing through and needed directions and saw a man a sitting on the side of the road gnawing on a bone. I have read several of your Love Inspired Historical and I must say, I really enjoyed this one. It was funny, it had suspense (glad Nate finally got Stogsdill) and lots of love between Nate, Carly and Henry. Hope we see one about Nate's sister and the sheriff soon.

I'm a sucker for an attention-grabbing opening sentence so when I read "A woman should mourn the loss of her husband." a chill of anticipation shot right down my spine. Those nine innocuous words strung together had the power to light my imagination on fire. I immediately wanted to know this woman and the painful history that somber statement hints at. In short -- I was hooked.

Carly is a "female tinderbox" (Nate's words, not mine and don't they paint a vivid picture?). She is prickly -- especially where Nate is concerned. These two are at cross purposes from the get go. The ownership of the seamstress shop is a tangled legal mess that doesn't bode well for a burgeoning romance which makes the tender moments all the more appealing.

There's plenty of strife, a hint of danger and a wonderful cast of secondary characters who strive to help set things right. In fact, the innocent faith of a young boy goes a long way towards bringing Nate and Carly together for good. A touching story of redemption and second chances.

Myra Johnson says

Janet Dean remains one of my favorite authors of inspirational historical romance. She takes great care in creating flawed but sympathetic characters who find their way quickly into your heart. She's also diligent about research and bringing each scene vividly to life on the page.

In this story of a bounty hunter seeking revenge and a widowed seamstress struggling to provide for her young son, I couldn't help but wonder how Ms. Dean would resolve their conflict of interest over the seamstress shop the bounty hunter's sister now holds the deed to. But the romance develops naturally, and the ending is sweetly satisfying for each of the central characters as they find their way to a deeper faith in God's provision and healing.

Harlequin Books says

"Dean's stand-alone is a sweet romance featuring an emotionally scarred heroine who endured a troubled marriage and a hero who feels he needs to repay his sibling. The Bounty Hunter's Redemption is a delightful and entertaining read about forgiveness and the restoration of faith" (RT Book Reviews, 4 stars).

Penny Ramirez says

Sweet. Predictable. Nice resolution.

Carly is a young widow raising her little boy after her husband has been killed by a bounty hunter, who informs Carly that her husband gambled away her seamstress business that he is claiming for his sister Anna. A judge must determine who is the rightful owner. Carly is drawn to Nate but tries not to be involved with him since he is still hunting a dangerous outlaw.

When Carly's son Henry is in grave danger, Nate almost gives up his life to rescue him. He finally realizes what is really important and changes his life.

I enjoyed reading the story of Carly and Nate and found it to be a great summer read.

I won this book from Goodreads in exchange for an honest review.

Sherida Stewart says

A thrilling read as an unlikely couple face conflict and danger, both unsure of ever having a happily-ever-after.

At the beginning of The Bounty Hunter's Redemption, it appears seamstress Carly and bounty hunter Nate would never be able to find a satisfying relationship together. They are hurting people brought together by unusual circumstances with major conflicts standing between them. There is suspense as Nate hunts for the criminal who's actions filled him with hate. Carly must face her own guilt about decisions she made in her past. Her charming sewing establishment, which is the center of controversy, and her friend Anna, Nate's sister, sparkle in this story. Nate is a driven bounty hunter who carries guilt and hatred in his heart, but he is compassionate towards Anna and shows kindness to Henry, Carly's son. He is a great hero. I was touched by the gentle faith message that God loves all and He forgives us even if we haven't forgiven ourselves. I highly recommend The Bounty Hunter's Redemption, with its exciting and action-packed conclusion leading into a sweet and tender ending scene.

*I won a copy of this book with no obligation to write a review. I'm happy to express my honest opinion of this fun story.

The Bounty Hunter's Redemption by Janet Dean. Nate Sergeant is a bounty hunter. He became one when a man shot his parents, then later he also shot his girl friend. Now Nate is out looking for this man. Plus his sister's husband was killed. Her husband won in a poker game a dress making store in a small time. They move to the small town. Carly Richards says she owns the dress store. The deed wasn't in her safe. Nate had it. They were waiting for the judge to come to town to decide who owns it. Anna the sister works with Carly at the dress shop and become friends. Its a historical book. A lot goes on in this story. A must read to learn all that goes on.

Linda Flatley says

The setting for this Love Inspired Historical novel is a town named Gnaw Bone in Indiana. That should capture the interest of most readers along with a man and woman fighting their attraction to each other. A fun read and a happy ending.....what more can you ask for?
