Sorority Sister Diane Hoh

When Maxie McKeon pledges Omega Phi Delta, she figures she's got it made. She loves her new sisters. And everyone knows Omegas throw the best parties and go out with the cutest guys.

But someone on campus isn't crazy about the sorority.

That person is just, well, crazy.

And he—or she—is determined to destroy the house and everyone in it.

Joining Omega won't change Maxie's life.

It will just shorten it.

Aunque el anterior libro que leí de la misma colección y me encanto este no lo hizo tanto. No siento que las razones del culpable final hayan sido muy justificables o también la mayoría de las cosas que pasan eran muy repetitivas y aveces aburridas, aún así fue entretenido de leer, a pesar de la decepción que me dio no fue tan malo.

There's just something brilliant about Point Horror books. When I spot one on the shelf I immediately get a wave of nostalgia. These were the big girl books; when I graduated into the 'teenage/young adult' section in my local library and was old enough to read Point Horrors.

They are all essentially about American teenagers, normally in High School or College, mainly a girl protagonist, with someone who has a grudge against someone. They all have the big reveal at the end as to who the killer/person trying to harm others is. Annoyingly I never guess who the baddie is and even now, at age 24, I still didn't guess this one.

Sorority Sister was just like all the others, similar plot, but this time based in a Sorority house. The characters weren't particularly interesting and the 'scary stuff' is more prank-like to begin with. It isn't one of the better Point Horrors I've read. However it was very easy to read and I could have done it in one sitting.

Hoh is normally one of the better Point Horror writers so it's a shame that this one wasn't as good as her others.

I have no idea why this book got such high ratings lol. It's not terrible, but it's extremely not great lol. It's a very slow starter. It's supposed to be scary but it's really not. It's a slightly frightening mystery. And my biggest complain is that seriously like NONE of the characters are really at all developed, including the narrator/POV girl, Maxie. The only one with really any personality is Maxie's non-sorority friend Jenna.

The first half of this was pretty slow. There was a sense of uneasiness, but nothing really that exciting. Also, it didn't help that I couldn't stand Brendan and Jenna. I felt terrible for Maxie having to deal with such unsupportive, crappy friends. They were so unreasonably angry about her being in a sorority and it seemed so out of place. The snide comments and petty behavior were super annoying and Maxie should have cut ties with them after the fiftieth time she had to listen to them complain.

My thoughts on this book turned completely around after the part where (view spoiler). Oh my god, that entire situation scared the crap out of me, especially once (view spoiler). There were a couple of other good ones that freaked me out too, like when (view spoiler). The reveal of who was behind things was just okay, but those creepy moments made up for any underwhelming feelings I had.

Not my favorite, but have read this at least 6 times. I found it very silly and frustrating. Nobody ever wants to call the police in Nightmare hall books. I became really annoyed with the nutbag's antics. The "Tia Maria" parts were scary and thrilling, but it took a painfully long time to get to that.

I found this series when I was in 6th grade and fell in love. I was so excited to find some on ebook and be able to reread them.

As per usual with point horror I enjoyed the cheesiness of the book (I'm 35) but I found the ending rather anticlimactic.

Good story with lots of good characters. I enjoyed the different happening in this book and was keen to find out whodunit .

remember these from Jr school, rather well written, a lot like Sorority Row strangely enough:-)

I was really looking forward to this one, sadly it was not all that good.

Now I hear you all ask: Why? Well let just say I always hate it when people in horror movies or books go into a dark cellar, or let people inside the house they don't know or run away from the murderer when they have a car/bicycle/faster transportation ready. And quite a few things happened in this book that were typical horror stupidities. Oh hey, we have troubles with people, let's just open up the door to that stranger we might not know. Or, oh hey, I am being followed by a murderer, let's hide in that dangerous chute.

I just kept shaking my head at the things the main character and her friends did.

I did like the main character if we exclude all the stupidity. She was nice, friendly and did her best to keep both her friends and her sorority happy. Sadly of course for this you need friends who understand that you also have other life things to do and can't be with them 24/7. More on that in a later paragraph.

I was happy to see that even when things went down in her sorority, that she stuck with them, tried to help out the best she could. That shows character and also shows that she is a perfect fit with the sorority.

We also meet a character from the previous books. Cath! Sadly we don't see a lot of her, but it was great fun to see her at the sorority.

The whodunit? I had a few suspects, but in the end it turned out to be a total random person, and sure, there might be hints leading to it. But it was midnight, I was tired after a busy day and I just couldn't see the hints. Maybe next time I read it (in a few years), I will see the hints.

Now on the friends/boyfriend part. Gosh, that was really the most annoying thing happening in the book. Every time something went wrong in the sorority, Jenna and Brendan were there like vultures seeking prey. Constantly nagging Maxie to just live in the normal dorms again. And I can tell you, hearing that said like 10+ times in a book gets really urgh.

Then we have the whole boyfriend and best friend do not want to understand that the sorority takes a bit of life away from them part. Maxie really did try to make offers, try to invite her friends to her parties, try to do things with them, but they were just bitchy about it. Like they expected her to be on call 24/7/365. Guys, this is not how friendship works. You are all like 18+, you all have your own lives as well, respect that and be happy she actually tries to make time for you.

The mystery/horror was decent, not really scary or creepy, though I did get a bit of goosebumps a few times.

And I know I said I am happy that books don't have a supernatural touch? Meh, I am over that. This is like the 3rd or so book from this series now without supernatural and I miss it. Hoping that the next book(s) I will read will have it again.
