Synod gathers, tell them lies:

Efforts garnered in your pride
Lost beneath the granite face.
Painted Lord, stand by her side;
Repentance is the Temple's grace.

The Guardian of the Fountain of Mendhi is dying, and her successor must step up to the task. Disciplinarian Pelai is ready to accept the burden of managing the powerful magics, but the timing is inconvenient. She has one last Disciplining to perform: assigning the punishment of the three Puhon brothers--men whose lives are entwined with a prophecy of a cataclysmic demonic invasion.

Six months of travel have given Puhon Krais time to reflect on, regret, and repent his many mistakes. But the worst lies just ahead: defying the leadership of Mendhi means suffering harsh punishments at the hands of the Disciplinarians once he comes home. Commanded by his Goddess, the proud Painted Warrior must find the strength to submit to his destiny...or find himself, and his whole world, on the wrong side of history.

For in the end, one brother is destined to save humanity, one will betray humanity, and one will walk away from his humanity.

3.5

Surrounded by prophecy, Krais seeks to atone and serve his Goddess by submitting fully to his punishment. He and his brothers are destined to either save, betray or walk away from humanity. It's heavily BDSM. Pelai teaches Krais to explore and accept sensation play. Krais' father wants his sons punished brutally for something beyond their control which leads each to their part in the prophecy. It was an okay read but I struggled to stay with the story.

Several editing issues.

These just get better and better! Loved this one!

Been awhile

It's been a while since the last novel in the series and I forgot what was going on. Made it tough to get traction in this book.

The sex overwhelms the story in this novel. The plot is thin and needs more development. The ending feels a bit rushed, even though it hits all of the various elements.

I will probably still read the next one when it comes along, but this is not a good sample of the complexity of the author's writing.

DNF - gave up when I discovered the book has a BDSM warning in the forward. Wish it had been in the book description. I would have saved my money. So disappointed that this promising fantasy series with interesting world building is devolving into an exploration of kinks.

I'm torn with this book. I really like the world it's set in, how everyone is dealing with the aftermath of Convocation of the Gods. Mendhi is a different place, one I'm not sure I like with their ways of Disciplining. There seems like it could be taken too far as it's up to the person and if that person is a bad person the punishments will be horrible. And we did see that. I also felt like we were preached on with Krais's punishment of learning the sexual side of BDSM.

The one thing that I did like was what was ferreted out and how the bad guys were punished. It was harsh, but considering what they were going to do it was warranted.
