Diana and Salvador- main characters

This book so far is the best! i have never read a book that made me laugh so much from the beginning till the middle..i love how Diana gets touched by a cavemen and how she thought that Salvador can't communicate with her because he doesnt speak english, but really he does know and understand english.

This book has a great plot, and leaves me wanting to stay up all night to finish it.but sadly i have to get some sleep at night. There are creatures in this book, a man-to-man fight for Diana, family, and tons of other things. if you think that this book sounds boring, its not. this book is a perfect read for when you have nothing else to do, or when you want to try something different. to tell you guys the truth, this book is the first book that i feel that has its own special thing about it...like its different from other books.

We find out on this island that...

- people who are on it don't age

- the caveman and the humans made a sort-of treaty, that whatever is in the north or whatever flows from the ocean that lands on the north is the humans possessions, and whatever lands on the south is the caveman's possessions.

the ending:

Estate(Salvador's close friend/Brother relationship) and Susie(a woman that estate and Diana rescued/also one of the people that was with Diana on the airplane b4 it went down on the island) decides to stay with Estate on the island and live with him happily ever after, and Diana leaves salvador and goes with her boss on a boat back to her real life, but once she was out of the island she decides that her happiness was with Salvador, so she goes back into the ocean and back into the island with Salvador to live happily ever after. Everyone is happy, and hopefully in the future future future future everyone will still be happy.

Dinosaurs, cavemen, hot Spainards, fun, exciting and sexy. I loved this book and would have given it 5 stars but I hated how the book ended. It was ended with high drama that didn't need to happen then rushed to an end with little to satisfy. Don't let my negative feelings on the ending keep you from reading it though because it really was an awesome read!

I really liked this book, yes it was different but thats part of why I liked it. This book has a Tarzan, Jane vibe to it in all the right ways. We have a possessive "mine" hero and a strong sweet heroine thrust into a new world she has to adjust to. My only complaint was that I really wished this book had an epilogue but I'm a sucker for an epilogue so I always want them. This book was really fun and out of the norm for me but I enjoyed it from the beginning to the end.

On a business trip with a not so great client Diana has dream of retiring young and selling this house will make her dream that much closer. Then the plain she is on has problems and is going down fast. When Diana wakes she realizes very quickly that this island isn't like any place she has ever been to. When men come and take her, Diana has no other thought but to escape. Then the man from her dreams while stuck on the plane comes and saves her while making claims that she is his.

Salvador keeps Diana safe and there is no denying the attraction, the longer they are together the more Diana starts to adjust and starts to fall for Salvador, but the life she left behind still calls to her. When Diana meets the others she finds happiness and soon can't imagine a life from Salvador. But this island isn't safe, and soon Diana will have to decide if Salvador is enough.

As I said before I really liked this book plain and simple. I had a lot of fun reading this book and didn't want to put it down. Salvador was a great hero, he wanted Diana, he got Diana, but he also loves her and would do anything to make sure she was happy. Diana was a great heroine yes she does some things that you think why, but she is thrust into a crazy world so really I probably would have done some of that too. The side characters were great and I enjoyed them so much I actually wished this had been a series with at least one more book. This is one of those books that perfect to read and escape into. If you are looking for a Tarzan Jane possessive book this is it.

Ok- this has it all for me. The premise is hilarious- it's Jurassic Park meets Gilligan's Island. A high end realtor on a private jet with her man whose client crashes in the Bermuda triangle on a mysterious island outside of time. The island comes with terrifying beach dwelling Tyrannosaurs Rex, brutal early humans, and just a few stranded European castaways. One of them is Salvador..and well..he's like Tarzan who speaks in a sexy Spanish accent. Yeah I like. The ONLY thing I had an issue with is that the h was in denial far too long and didn't put the facts together about what was happening. If there are dinosaurs on the island you are on as well as cave men- it follows that something is amiss with time- DUH.

Mandi Schreiner says

I enjoyed Jill Myles' Succubus Diary series this past year so when I learned she had a couple of self published books out, I grabbed them up. I went into Island Heat without having read the blurb and thought it was a contemporary, so when a dinosaur shows up (like an actual T-Rex), I was a little taken aback at first.

When Diana's plane crashes on the way to a business trip to Bermuda, she wakes up on a deserted island. It doesn't take her long to be discovered by native men who don't speak her language but it is easy to tell they mean her harm. As she flees from them, she not only must try to survive the extreme island conditions, but she starts to be hunted by an actual T-Rex. Scared and alone, she meets Salvador, a very attractive man clothed only in a loin cloth. Although they don't speak the same language, Salvador takes her to safety and soon she learns many more secrets this island holds.

Island Heat is kind of like Lost meets Jurassic Park. Told in Diana's point of view, at first I had to set aside reality just a bit as she crashes into the island. Although she wakes up sunburned, this is really the only "injury" she has after crashing from an airplane. She then spends days running around with no shoes on and just happens to find her suitcase and purse. Otherwise, I started to like this journey Diana goes on. She starts this quirky, yet very sexy romance with Salvador. He is pretty much like Tarzan – beating his chest in his scantily clad loin cloth making grunting noise at her. It's kind of hot!

Eventually these two find common ground. I don't want to spoil too much of how the story progresses. But there are twists and turns, and explanations for why there are dinosaurs roaming around. And some more eerie discoveries. For a novella, I really think the world is built up nicely, not giving us all the information at once and building up the suspense.

I think the romance between Diana and Salvador progresses too quickly. I loved the hot smex, but the declaration of love feels too rushed. However, I did like how the story is wrapped up and the decision Diana makes at the end. Island Heat is a very entertaining, different kind of novella. (And it's only $.99!)

Obnoxious heroine

SPOILERS

"You love me.?" Yeah, Studly, I understand your surprise. I couldn't tell, either, not with all of her hitting and slapping. Was that supposed to be cute? It was not. Another thing that was not cute was the absolutely useless TSTL heroine. I am pretty sure he only loved her because she was the only woman on the island. The author had some great ideas, but really failed to create a believable love story.

I love quirky stuff, and Island Heat by Jill Myles certainly fits the bill! This was my first time reading this author, and it won't be the last. She packed a plane wreck, T Rex, posse of marauding cavemen, the Bermuda triangle, a time warp, beautiful tropical island, hot conquistador in a loincloth, lots of romance, and even a sweet HEA into one funky story. (Honestly, she had me at loincloth). The hero of this book, Salvador, is delicious. He's a Spanish Tarzan-y conquistador who keeps popping up to save the damsel in distress, or woo her with a nest filled with tropical flowers (swoon time). The fact that he is a gorgeous specimen of masculinity wearing only a loincloth is just the icing on the deserted island cake. The heroine is okay....I like my heroines a bit spunkier, especially if they are warding off ferocious dinosaurs and stuff. Anyhoo, this was a fun, entertaining read.

Every so often when I need something light and enjoyable to read, I find myself re-reading a Jill Myles book! Island Heat is one of my favorites, Salvador is Diana's very own Tarzan.

After crashing on an island, Diana is suddenly fearing for her life. Dinosaurs, Cave men, and a Spanish jungle man, Diana is in for a ride...

Spuffed says

These type of books are what I really love. Survival while stranded on a deserted island with epic love story and a time travel twist. Unfortunately, this one wasn't very epic. The beginning is very fast paced and action packed then it just kind of dribbles on.

Quick Rundown: Chick on a plane with client, stewardess and pilot on way to Bermuda crash through a time travel portal onto a deserted island. At first, as the lone survivor she gets taken by natives but is rescued by surfer boy who turns out to be from 15th century (?) Spain. There are dinosaurs and 3 others (from 19th century Europe ?) caught on this island where there is no time. Small struggle to get the stewardess and client from the natives. Small struggle with a T-Rex. Kissing in a dinosaur nest of flowers. Chick's lackluster attempt at escape with her client in a washed up boat before she realizes she's in love and doesn't want to leave. The end. Not compelling enough to hide spoilers.

Characters: Fine but blah. Nothing really happens. Very little struggle for survival. Very little interaction between all the characters. We never really learn the others' histories or get an opportunity to love them. They're just window dressing and plain at that. Salvador (surfer looking dude) doesn't tell chick that he speaks English at beginning and never says why. Chick is really slow on the uptake that these people aren't from her time period-- apparently, the T-Rex and eating out of conquistador helmets aren't enough of a clue. Chick's in insta-lust with Dude which is fine but lackluster, again.

World Building: Fine. Mud, plants, waterfall, cave...check.

Overall, completely lackluster and my lust for deserted island stories was not actualized. If there had been more personal interaction or conflict between characters then it would have gotten 4 stars from me.

I wanted something different, and I definitely got it. Just imagine you're stranded on an island with dinosaurs, dirty little cavemen, and a Spanish speaking Tarzan. Yeah. It's unexpected and it was an awesome read!

Robinson Crusoe. Cast Away. The Land that Time Forgot. Lost. 10 Million BC. When Dinosaurs Ruled the Earth. All of these movies come to mind. If you enjoyed any of these, and enjoy romance, then you'll love this book. "Most excellent!" as Bill would say.
