The kids like it.

Belinda Levy says

a little too wordy for my group

Adorable! I especially loved the little explanations of Irish traditions in the story. You learned a little about the history without sacrificing the cute story. And the illustrations are so full of detail - I loved it!

I learned some Gaelic phrases: Cead Mile Failte means a hundred thousand welcomes. A Shillelagh is a stout oak club that a leprechaun carries to defend himself.

It's a cute St. Patty's Day story about catching that Leprechaun. The characters are Irish Mice and a cousin from America. This was late coming from the library.

The kids enjoyed this book. It's funny how children seem to relate any story better if it's an animal than a person in many cases.

This book was a recommendation for an extra lesson after we did our unit on Ireland and Europe. The kids learned some Gaelic words and some typical Irish traditions so it was a nice reading to enforce some already learned concepts. It was also fun to learn about leprechauns and St. Patrick's Day, something they remembered from us celebrating it this year. Overall a fun book, somewhere around a level 2 reading level.
