Reading on an audio CD by the BBC. So far it's fantastic. It reads like a live radio show, and the acting is just amazing.

Mark Sabol says

Dickens knows how to weave a great plot, but it's his turn of phrase and creative use of language that really grabs me.

Nadyne says

"The Life and Adventure of Nicholas Nickleby" is like I expect a Dickens to be. A widow with two children gone poor, a villainous and ruthless uncle and schoolteacher, poor abused boys, angel-like ladies, chivalrous young men, misery, poverty, abuse... and a fairytale-like ending.

I loved it, as I loved "Oliver Twist", "Great Expectations" and "Martin Chuzzlewit", but curiously enough I have to read books like this in autumn or winter.
