Rebecca Rash says

Have a really old copy, and have read all once, but always go back for my favorites.

Tasia says

It's a nice collection, though it can wax didactic. Many poems can appear very naive; just think happy thoughts, and you'll be happy! Oh, if we were all happy and peaceful, the world would be a better place. Things like that. The introduction says that we live in a world where cynicism is the norm, that if you have any kind of sentiment or faith, you're seen as childish. Thinking of that, it seems like I'm holding these virtues against the collection... but while I do value faith in humanity and the beauty of a pure thought, I had too many moments of "but life isn't that simple."

Too sentimental for me? Maybe. But it's a good book for someone who is a layman of poetry.

Alice says

I enjoyed this compilation of poetry so much that there really isn't any binding left on my book to hold it together.

Maheswary Mohanty says

Amazing is one word and even that is difficult to comprehend in this case!

Fredrick Danysh says

This is a collection of poems by various poets about life, happiness, faith, and other topics. There is something for everyone here and all are inspirational.

Pamela Moore says

This is an anthology of light poetry on nearly every subject of interest. Everyone should find something in this book -- if you are a layman of poetry.

Sadie says

I love poetry and this collection of poems didn't disappoint. Most of them are touching, feel-good, rhyming ones..which is my favorite kind of poem.

Snailbookworm says

A beautiful compilation of lovely, inspiring and thought provoking poems. One of the best gifts I received.

Rebecca says

I love this poetry book. I happened upon it when I was browsing at the bookstore one day. I didn't realize what a treasure it would be. I'm so glad I have it.

Most of the poetry is easy to read, thought provoking, and inspiring. It's not a book of long poems; but it does have a lot of well-known poetry in it.

If you can find a copy, I recommend it. It's a great book to reference now and again. I did read it cover to cover the first time. Then I highlighted my favorites so I could read them again.

Angela says

This is beautiful light compilation of poems.

Jacqueline Cocklin says

Loved it!!

Tonya says

When feeling low I can't think of a more constructive way to lift ones spirit.

Imania Margria says

This collection of touching poems has inspired me throughout my life. I have read it from cover to cover. Each poem is so moving and inspiring and can be used to motivate you through and time or event in your life, both good and bad. They are all still relatable no matter how old they are. Definitely the top of my favorite poetry collections list. Love it!
