Anne Goodwin says

His story begins in September 1936, with a beautiful young peasant woman alighting from the Orient Express at Aleppo station, along with, but separate from, a delegation of Syrian nationalists and politicians returning from a successful diplomatic mission to France. Widad, the woman, becomes a dancer with the binat al-ishreh, a community of women who live, love and make music together, performing at weddings and at all-female parties where women, married to men, are free to pair up and make love.
