Oh this was just such a wonderful read. When the book opens we see our heroine who is so at the end of her rope thinking of ending her life but when she witnesses an accident, her cop instinct make her rescue a little girl, injuring her in the process. Our hero the girl's father finds the injured heroine days later in the dump of her apartment. When the heroine's eleven-year-old daughter was killed in a drive-by shooting a year back the heroine went to pieces, resigning from the force, shutting everyone out, leasing out her house to live in a dump. She doesn't want to be saved, or be happy. The hero tracks her down to thank her and figure out if she was involved in his daughter's kidnapping. He takes her to his house to recuperate where every time she looks at his daughter she flinches from the pain of her memories. She recuperates physically but not emotionally at his place. When she receives a call from her ex-partner that the hero could be involved in arms smuggling through his company she agrees to the hero's proposal to stay on to be a security consultant. These two gradually grow closer with the hero helping her heal by asking her about her daughter, and just listening. Both of them were similar in the extent that they didn't have the most secure childhood and the love for their kids. I liked seeing these two grow closer developing an unmistakable bond. This was such a heart-wrenching read sometimes touching on a parent's loss. An amazing read!

Blah

I am normally a huge RaeAnne Thayne fan. This book didn't do it for me. The heroine was not likeable at all. The hero forgave way to quickly. It was predictable. So disappointed.

Really Really Good

From start to finish, this fast paced not kept me involved and holding my breath. Waiting to see what was going to happen next.
