Arapaho Lance (Crow Killer #1) Alfred Dennis

A Native American Fiction full of adventure and romance. Great feats of the warlike Arapaho arise as Jedidiah Bracket faces obstacles and becomes the great Arapaho Warrior and Lance Bearer, Crow Killer.

Eighteen hundred and forty nine, western Nebraska Territory, the crossing of the North Platte was rough. Jedidiah Bracket fell headfirst into the raging waters of the river and survived only to find himself surrounded by hostile Arapaho warriors.

One warrior wanted to kill him, but after discovering the mark of the Arapaho Lance on his back, he was taken back to their village. Jed was treated with respect and taught the passage of manhood into the Arapaho Lance Bearers by the one warrior that hated him most, Walking Horse. Taught the language and nursed back to health by Walking Horse's woman, the beautiful Little Antelope, Jed had many trials to overcome.

This book is in the top of my list as one of my favorites.

I have read hundreds of books of this type, western fiction based on fact. I recommend it to anyone who shares my interest in this subject matter.

An AD Western Novel About A Young White Man Raised by Indians

AD has penned a western novel about a young man who, when crossing a river, is knocked out and later rescued by the Arapaho Indians. He is trained in the way of life for Indians and exceeds the tribal needs in what is expected as a warrior. He fights the other tribes with reckless abandon. This is an excellent read for the genre.....DEHS
