Story was very cute and very simple. I only read YA when i need a break from the usual erotica or hard core romances and I need something to give my emotions a break.

Despite the grammar errors the book is well written and if you're a fan of dual POVs like I am you may appreciate it. However, like one of the other reviewers said some chapters had overlaps where the same thing was being expressed by both Tara and Cory.

Ummmmmm I recommend this book to anyone looking to take a break from there normal genre or someone that is just looking for something refreshing and different to read ... I can say I choked up alil bit at the end (the very last letter) But thats just cause im an emotional sucker lls

Tara moves to a new town her senior year. Cory is the boy next door who has some unwanted baggage, and Tara is just trying to get by. When Tara stumbles on a box of letters from the old owner, her and Cory have a bonding moment. After reading the letters secrets will make sense and Tara will be left with some questions.

My only complaint about this book was that it was way too short!!! I couldn't put it down. It was an adorable quick read!

★★★ 1/2! A feel-good & sweet coming-of age novella about two teens striking up a friendship and some life lessons learned from a box of letters!

“I looked up and our eyes locked. I could see the longing in his eyes. I had never kissed a boy before, and I had never wanted to as much as I did right now.”

Hero: Cory Taylor/17 years/student-soccer player/brown hair/green eyes

Heroine: Tara Burke/17 years/student/strawberry blond hair/light aquamarine-blue eyes

Love between the lines is a coming of age story about a girl Tara Burke, moving to a new town meeting her next-door neighbor, Cory Taylor. It follows them as they strike up a friendship, set against a box full of old letters that they are reading together. As the mystery of the letters unfolds, so does a sweet romance between the two. There are life lessons to be learned and obstacles to overcome, mainly bullies and vindicate exes.

Three words to describe Cory: charming, noble and sweet.

Three words to describe Tara: sweet, timid and loyal.

I would classify Love between the lines as a sweet very Young Adult story. It is alternating between Cory's and Tara's POV. About 100 pages long. Novella was free on Amazon.

Ms. Plendle did an excellent job with both character development and the idea of the mystery surrounding the letters. However the plot was somewhat predictable. And I might have wished the story spanned a longer period of time. Overall a sweet, feel-good read!!

Love Between the Lines is a sweet story about Cory and his new neighbor Tara, and how over the course of a year they find themselves entangled with each other and a box of letters left by Cory's previous neighbor Ms. Dixon. It's not the most fleshed out story and it doesn't have the most original love story plot but it is a really sweet refresher and great for a break between novels. I could see where most of it was going and how it was going to play out but I still enjoyed the ride.

This was a good easy read. I loved when I read books based in Iowa (makes them feel more real to me).

Moving to Iowa only weeks before her senior year, Tara hopes to just blend in. What she doesn't expect to find is herself the target of Ashley, the popular "mean girl", Cory, the boy next door who has her feeling things she never has before, and the box of letters they share that will challenge everything they have ever known, all while searching for truth and love between the lines.

This book hit home a little for me because I moved to Iowa when I was a junior in high school, and I was immediately targeted by the "mean girl" at school too.

I loved that this was a short read, although, I am sure it would have made an awesome novel too. I loved the characters, Tara and Cory. The story that is behind the letters made me cry like a baby at the end. Forgiveness is hard...

It was okay... Needs some editing... Okay storyline, not something I would re-read, but okay.
