When two gorgeous studs fall out of the sky, Jerri and Sam think they've hit the jackpot. By all appearances, the handsome twins are intensely attracted to the two best friends.

Travelers from a desolated future devoid of women, Kar'Four and Deuce are dying to experience sex for the first time, as well as warmth, passion and love. But the men hide a secret they're afraid to share. One that threatens their chances to finally know the love they've hungered for their entire lives. The truth is that they're not completely human. Cloned from a combination of human and animal DNA, these mouthwatering males are half wild.

OK I've had this book for nearly 4 years on my TBR list (THIS is what happens when you decide you REALLY ought to read all those books you bought ages ago!!)

Great fun - strange, nekkid men falling out of nowhere at the feet of two friends and SHAZAM!! they fall in love/lust/whatever. Simple story, fairly hot sex, and an HEA.

Both Madison Hayes and Rhyannon Byrd are good, Ellora's Cave stock, so the writing is crisp, flows easily, with no errors. A satisfying read, although by today's (2013) standard, this trope has been done to death :)

Poorly written. Even as a sci-fy-esq romance, the character development was poor. It read like two separate stories that were smushed together for length purposes. It's like the authors didn't collaborate at all with each other; just wrote out each part with their preferred couple, then had some third party (I'm assuming some 6th grader) combine both stories together to get what we have here...
